Push your career to the next level with a bachelor's degree in Emergency Medical Services (EMS) at Franklin Pierce University. Certified paramedics, emergency medical technicians, fire fighters, police officers, and other protective services personnel can develop the academic foundation for leadership of EMS organizations.

Explore legal, political, and regulatory assessments in EMS settings, as well as the study of technology-based health applications and healthy work environments. Develop critical thinking and decision-making skills to effectively manage emergency situations.

Combine online learning, part or full-time study, and six academic terms, to create a flexible and personalized schedule. Receive 40 credits for your paramedic license along with credits for life experience, including your certifications, professional licenses, and on-the-job training.

You may also be eligible for grants, loans, and scholarships in the form of financial aid. This non-clinical degree program does not lead to EMT or paramedic certifications.
